Social Security

How would you protect Social Security for today's seniors and strengthen it for future generations?

AARP's Position:

Social Security should continue to guarantee that Americans who work and pay into the system receive benefits based on what they earn and contribute. Benefits should keep up with inflation and last for as long as an individual lives. We must strengthen Social Security for the future and protect benefits for people who count on them most, including surviving spouses and families, lower-wage workers, and disabled individuals who no longer can work. Social Security must be put on stable financial ground, but any adjustments should be implemented gradually so changes do not impact those in or near retirement.

Gregory W. Meeks (Dem):

Congressman Meeks has never wavered in his commitment to protecting and preserving Social Security and Medicare for current and future generations of Americans. He strongly supported the Democratic budget plan for fiscal year 2005 because it would have allowed our nation to strengthen Social Security and Medicare, pay down the national debt, invest in crucial priorities such as education, social safety net programs for the uninsured and elderly, and our national defense/homeland security. Medicare

How would you put Medicare on stronger financial ground and protect today's seniors and future retirees from rising health costs?

AARP's Position:

Medicare should be strengthened and improved so both current and future generations can count on having access to high-quality, affordable coverage. Medicare should continue to guarantee a specific set of benefits that are affordable and meet a person's health care needs. Medicare should offer choices that ensure access to high-quality health care. Medicare should improve the quality, safety, and efficiency of care by emphasizing value and cracking down on fraud, waste, and abuse.

Financial Security

How would you help Americans save so they can secure their future and live independently as they age?

AARP's Position:

More opportunities and incentives should be available for all Americans to plan and save so they can have a more secure future. Freedom from age discrimination is a fundamental right and critical to Americans' ability to have a secure retirement. Every worker should be treated fairly, regardless of age. We need to support family caregivers who make it possible for more seniors to live in their homes and communities, where they want, rather than taxpayers and struggling families paying for costlier care.

Gregory W. Meeks (Dem):

"I stand with President Obama and Congressional Democrats in calling for an extension of unemployment insurance benefits (UI). According to the Congressional Budget Office and the White House Council of Economic Advisors, extending UI is one of the best ways to stimulate the economy while preventing millions Americans from slipping into poverty. UI benefits help families pay their mortgage and rents, as well as, purchase food and transportation and other necessities that enable people to find work."
