Social Security

How would you protect Social Security for today's seniors and strengthen it for future generations?

AARP's Position:

Social Security should continue to guarantee that Americans who work and pay into the system receive benefits based on what they earn and contribute. Benefits should keep up with inflation and last for as long as an individual lives. We must strengthen Social Security for the future and protect benefits for people who count on them most, including surviving spouses and families, lower-wage workers, and disabled individuals who no longer can work. Social Security must be put on stable financial ground, but any adjustments should be implemented gradually so changes do not impact those in or near retirement.

Chuck J. Fleischmann (Rep):

"So certainly I think that is a viable solution to have partial privatization of the system [...] One of the ways to do that would be to have a certain percentage to be determined of those funds set aside in a private account, which could be saved invested and helped or dealt with by the individual. A move towards privatization across the board in my view is always a better move as opposed to more and more government control." (Source: Times free press, <http://goo.gl/VvZxF8>)

Mary M. Headrick (Dem):

Social Security is not broken. Protect this program. I will not allow privatization nor Wall-Street invasion. (Source: Headrick Campaign site, <http://ow.ly/xWjep>)

Medicare

How would you put Medicare on stronger financial ground and protect today's seniors and future retirees from rising health costs?

AARP's Position:

Medicare should be strengthened and improved so both current and future generations can count on having access to high-quality, affordable coverage. Medicare should continue to guarantee a specific set of benefits that are affordable and meet a person's health care needs. Medicare should offer choices that ensure access to high-quality health care. Medicare should improve the quality, safety, and efficiency of care by emphasizing value and cracking down on fraud, waste, and abuse.

Chuck J. Fleischmann (Rep):

"If elected to Congress, I would advocate Medicare for all," he wrote on his website. (Source: Times Free Press, <http://goo.gl/ZJRjoF>)

Mary M. Headrick (Dem):

Medicare works but it will soon be too expensive. Private health insurance is already too expensive. We need to change how we pay for health care and we need to understand what works and doesn't work for good health. Some of the problems, like our obesity, can be tackled with public health programs. Financial Security

How would you help Americans save so they can secure their future and live independently as they age?

AARP's Position:

More opportunities and incentives should be available for all Americans to plan and save so they can have a more secure future. Freedom from age discrimination is a fundamental right and critical to Americans' ability to have a secure retirement. Every worker should be treated fairly, regardless of age. We need to support family caregivers who make it possible for more seniors to live in their homes and communities, where they want, rather than taxpayers and struggling families paying for costlier care.

Chuck J. Fleischmann (Rep):

AARP did extensive research but was unable to find any public statement on this issue by July 11, 2014.

Mary M. Headrick (Dem):

For working families we need 'Middle Class' jobs. That includes blue collar manufacturing and blue collar service jobs that pay a living wage with benefits. I don't care if benefits are part of the employer's package or part of a government package. I just want families to be able to work hard in a safe environment for proper wages.
