Social Security

How would you protect Social Security for today's seniors and strengthen it for future generations?

AARP's Position:

Social Security should continue to guarantee that Americans who work and pay into the system receive benefits based on what they earn and contribute. Benefits should keep up with inflation and last for as long as an individual lives. We must strengthen Social Security for the future and protect benefits for people who count on them most, including surviving spouses and families, lower-wage workers, and disabled individuals who no longer can work. Social Security must be put on stable financial ground, but any adjustments should be implemented gradually so changes do not impact those in or near retirement.

Jason Chaffetz (Rep):

"There is no excuse for allowing Social Security to become insolvent," said Chaffetz. "The program is unsustainable in its current form. However, this problem is completely within our power to resolve without tax increases and while protecting retirees. This series of simple steps will make the program solvent and allow younger generations to more accurately anticipate their own retirement needs." Medicare

How would you put Medicare on stronger financial ground and protect today's seniors and future retirees from rising health costs?

AARP's Position:

Medicare should be strengthened and improved so both current and future generations can count on having access to high-quality, affordable coverage. Medicare should continue to guarantee a specific set of benefits that are affordable and meet a person's health care needs. Medicare should offer choices that ensure access to high-quality health care. Medicare should improve the quality, safety, and efficiency of care by emphasizing value and cracking down on fraud, waste, and abuse.

Jason Chaffetz (Rep):

Well, I think what they're saying is we actually like the program, we want the program, and in order to save the program, we got to reform the program. That's what we're trying to say and not just on Medicare, but also doing some things with block granting to Medicaid for the states to give them some flexibility...I think that's ultimately when people digest that, they'll understand that we're trying to be the adults in the room and trying to do the responsible thing in order to save these programs. Financial Security

How would you help Americans save so they can secure their future and live independently as they age?

AARP's Position:

More opportunities and incentives should be available for all Americans to plan and save so they can have a more secure future. Freedom from age discrimination is a fundamental right and critical to Americans' ability to have a secure retirement. Every worker should be treated fairly, regardless of age. We need to support family caregivers who make it possible for more seniors to live in their homes and communities, where they want, rather than taxpayers and struggling families paying for costlier care.

Jason Chaffetz (Rep):

If we want to create jobs, we need to remove burdensome government regulations and lower the corporate income tax rate. By doing so, we will create a measure of regulatory certainty that will incentivize investment, ingenuity and job growth. (Source: Jason for Congress; <http://ow.ly/cOmf>)
