Social Security

How would you protect Social Security for today's seniors and strengthen it for future generations?

AARP's Position:

Social Security should continue to guarantee that Americans who work and pay into the system receive benefits based on what they earn and contribute. Benefits should keep up with inflation and last for as long as an individual lives. We must strengthen Social Security for the future and protect benefits for people who count on them most, including surviving spouses and families, lower-wage workers, and disabled individuals who no longer can work. Social Security must be put on stable financial ground, but any adjustments should be implemented gradually so changes do not impact those in or near retirement.

Richard Grayson (Dem):

AARP did extensive research but was unable to find any public statement on this issue by July 11, 2014.

Cynthia M. Lummis (Rep):

For those currently in the Social Security System, we can't "change the rules in the middle of the game." So if you are already close to retirement or receiving Social Security, I will protect your benefits. I also recognize that if we continue the system as is, it will become insolvent and our children and grandchildren will be left out. We need to analyze the problem and come up with solutions to protect Social Security for young Americans. Fixing Social Security is a necessary first step in addressing the looming entitlement crisis that includes not just Social Security, but also Medicare and Medicaid. Medicare

How would you put Medicare on stronger financial ground and protect today's seniors and future retirees from rising health costs?

AARP's Position:

Medicare should be strengthened and improved so both current and future generations can count on having access to high-quality, affordable coverage. Medicare should continue to guarantee a specific set of benefits that are affordable and meet a person's health care needs. Medicare should offer choices that ensure access to high-quality health care. Medicare should improve the quality, safety, and efficiency of care by emphasizing value and cracking down on fraud, waste, and abuse.

Financial Security

How would you help Americans save so they can secure their future and live independently as they age?

AARP's Position:

More opportunities and incentives should be available for all Americans to plan and save so they can have a more secure future. Freedom from age discrimination is a fundamental right and critical to Americans' ability to have a secure retirement. Every worker should be treated fairly, regardless of age. We need to support family caregivers who make it possible for more seniors to live in their homes and communities, where they want, rather than taxpayers and struggling families paying for costlier care.

Cynthia M. Lummis (Rep):

In this economic downturn, I will redouble my effort to advocate and promote small business. I believe it is the small businesses and entrepreneurship in our communities that will create the jobs that will pull our economy out of recession.
